HISTORY OF LOBKOWICZ PALACE

Lobkowitz Palace was built in the second half of the 16th century by Czech nobleman Jaroslav of Pernštejn (1528-1569). Originally known as the Pernštejn Palace, it acquired its present name when Jaroslav's niece, Polyxena (1566-1642), married the 1st Prince Lobkowitz, Zdeněk Vojtěch (1568-1628), in 1603. In the centuries following that marriage, the Palace witnessed some of Bohemia's most significant historical events.

At the start of World War II, the Palace was confiscated from the Lobkowitz family by the Nazi forces invading Czechoslovakia. Returned in 1945, it was seized again following the communist takeover of the country in 1948. After the Velvet Revolution of 1989 and the subsequent fall of the communist government, the passage of restitution laws made it possible in 2002 for the Palace to be returned to the Lobkowitzes once again.

On 2 April 2007, following more than four years of planning, restoration and refurbishment, the Palace was opened to the public for the first time. Today, it houses the Lobkowitz Palace Museum and serves as a unique venue for private and corporate events.

The Lobkowitz Collections is the oldest largest private art collection in the Czech Republic. Highlights from The Collections include world-famous paintings by three Brueghels, Canaletto, Cranach, Rubens and Veronese; decorative arts from the medieval, Renaissance and Baroque periods; ceramics from the 16th through the 20th centuries; exceptional arms and armor; musical instruments, musical scores and autograph manuscripts by many of the greatest composers of the 17th, 18th and 19th centuries, including Beethoven and Mozart; a comprehensive historical archive and one of the finest private libraries in Central Europe.

Confiscated from the Lobkowitz family twice in the 20th century – first by the Nazis at the start of World War II and then by the communist government in 1948 – The Collections remained out of the family's possession for nearly forty years. Returned to the Lobkowitzes following the passage of restitution laws in the early 1990s, The Collections is today housed in part at the Lobkowitz Palace Museum, which is open to the public.
